

Dear readers of the JWLD Journal,

We are thrilled to announce the publication of our special issue, as we celebrate the 25th anniversary of our journal. To commemorate this milestone, we have expanded our topics to encompass new scientific disciplines including life sciences, agriculture, horticulture, ecology, plant physiology, geology, microbiology, earth and environmental sciences, architecture and urban planning, civil engineering and transportation, environmental engineering, mining and energy, social and economic geography, and spatial economics.

The special issue was created to feature the scientific results of our well-respected and esteemed local and international Editorial Board members. Please note that all manuscripts went through a rigorous editorial process, including peer review by at least two reviewers, and only the best articles were selected for publication.

Best regards,

Editor-in-Chief of JWLD